STATE LAW SCHOOL.

[illegible] of the Sixth Annual Session Last Evening.

[illegible] annual session of the law school of [illegible] Oregon was opened last evening [illegible]. In the absence of the Hon [illegible] from the city, the chair was [illegible] the Hon. Lewis L. McArthur, United [illegible] attorney. [illegible] was a good attendance of members of the [illegible] and the students of the school and [illegible] university. After a few appropriate [illegible] remarks by the chairman in [illegible] the history and emphasized [illegible] the law school Professor Thornton [illegible] introductory address, as follows: [illegible] the Law School of the University of [illegible] the son of [illegible] after [illegible] and morals, and his [illegible] maxims which are only [illegible] the threads of [illegible] let us now [illegible] fathers who begat us. There [illegible] individuals and [illegible] it is peculiarly be[illegible] us dead. At the [illegible] American people have just [illegible] of their independ[illegible] of their national in[illegible] the services rend[illegible] these results by [illegible] distinguished jurist.

MARSHALL'S LIFE.

[illegible] born in the month of September [illegible] county of Fauquier and state [illegible] the Eastern states were thinly [illegible] were small, and the means of [illegible] poor. He spent his youth in the [illegible] much of his education from [illegible]. When in his twentieth year [illegible] officer's commission in the army of [illegible]. He took part in the battles of [illegible] Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth, [illegible] the privations of that terrible [illegible] winter which Washington's [illegible] at Valley Forge. Here the nobility [illegible] shone out conspicuously. "He [illegible] tempered man I ever knew," said [illegible] messmates. "During his sufferings [illegible] nothing disturbed him. If [illegible] bread to eat it was just as well; if [illegible] made no difference. If any of the [illegible] at their privations he would [illegible] good natured raillery or en[illegible] them by his own exuberance of [illegible]. He was an excellent companion, idolized [illegible] soldiers and his brother officers, whose [illegible] were enlivened by his inexhaustible [illegible] anecdote. When disputes arose he [illegible] selected as the arbiter. He was [illegible] to act as deputy judge advocate. [illegible] the close of the year 1779, his services in [illegible] being no longer necessary, he retired [illegible].

BEGINNING HIS PUBLIC CAREER.

[illegible] was elected first to the legislature of [illegible], and then to a seat in the execu[illegible]. Six years later (for we cannot linger [illegible]) he became a member of the [illegible] which met to consider the [illegible] constitution. The period [illegible] most critical in modern history [illegible] divided on that great [illegible] phase or another, has [illegible] American statesmen into oppo[illegible] of opinion that the pro[illegible] would unduly lessen the pro[illegible] individual states and might tend [illegible] central despotism. Others [illegible] federal government was [illegible] the states from mu[illegible] to give them a collective and [illegible] character. In Marshall's own [illegible] was even now divided into [illegible] the one of which con[illegible] as a nation, and labored in [illegible] the Federal head with powers [illegible] the preservation of the Union. The [illegible] to the state government [illegible] the powers of congress with jealousy [illegible] reluctantly to measures which [illegible] the head to act in any respect inde[illegible] of the members."

[illegible] the guidance of Madison, Marshall [illegible] establishment of a powerful national [illegible]. Influential friends, who loved and [illegible] entreated him not to adopt a [illegible] seemed to betoken sure defeat. But [illegible] studied the proposed constitu[illegible] had passed his scrutiny he was [illegible] to support it. There were giants of [illegible] those days. A discussion of thrilling [illegible] far reaching importance echoed for [illegible] through the halls of Richmond [illegible] battlefield, the contest, inactive [illegible] raged with increased fierceness around [illegible] centers. Chief among these points of [illegible] were the proposal to enable congress to [illegible] wherewith to pay the debts and pro[illegible] common defense and general welfare [illegible] the proposal that the presi[illegible] power to call out the militia, [illegible] the creation of a federal ju[illegible]. To these points Marshall addressed him[illegible] to Patrick Henry and James Monroe. [illegible] to the taxing power he contended [illegible] government devoid of it must be help[illegible] contemptible. Without money its opera[illegible] not be carried on. That money must [illegible] either directly from the people or indi[illegible] the states. He appealed to history to [illegible] supplies could never be effectively [illegible] requisitions on allied states [illegible] necessary such supplies might be for the [illegible] good. As to the calling out of the mili[illegible] used by the president he showed [illegible] this means could the public defense [illegible] certain and formidable. And he met [illegible] all the objections which had been raised [illegible] creation of that judiciary of which in [illegible] years he became so bright an ornament. [illegible] events have completely justified.

THE WISDOM OF HIS CONCLUSIONS.

[illegible] are even apt to think the propositions [illegible] advanced self-evident. In so thinking, [illegible] we are wise after the fact. He was wise [illegible] the fact, and therein his excellence con[illegible]. The maintenance of so high an argument [illegible] a crisis, against such opponents by a [illegible] yet of middle age set on him the indeli[illegible] seal of greatness. His advocacy was fortun[illegible] assisted by circumstances. During the de[illegible] came that nine states out of the orig[illegible] thirteen had accepted the Federal constitution [illegible] her lot with them by the close [illegible] of ten votes. The great victory was won. [illegible] American people formed a more perfect [illegible] they established justice; they insured a [illegible] domestic tranquillity; they provided [illegible] common defense; they secured the bless[illegible] liberty to themselves and their posterity. [illegible] months George Washington became [illegible] president of the United States.

During the ensuing years Marshall was engaged [illegible] practice at the bar of his own state [illegible] the federal courts, as the reports of the p[illegible] politics events occurred which [illegible] him into still greater publicity. In 1793 [illegible] England and France became engaged in that war [illegible] afterward laid the foundation of the fame [illegible] Nelson. France had abolished her ancient mon[illegible] and had set up a republic on the supposed [illegible] of universal brotherhood. It was natural [illegible] Americans still smarting from their own [illegible] conflict, should sympathize with [illegible] of this new republic. Many indeed [illegible] willing to rush into immediate war. The [illegible] president promptly issued a proclamation of neu[illegible] which for the time being intensified the [illegible] excitement. All who defended the procla[illegible] were deemed as enemies to republican [illegible] tories, royalists, aristocrats. Even so [illegible] man as James Madison bent before the [illegible] Marshall's clear judgment told him that [illegible] was wise and just and he dared [illegible] with Washington and Hamilton in sup[illegible]. Two years later he again braved popu[illegible] by upholding the validity of the com[illegible] treaty with Great Britain, which Wash[illegible] president, with the advice of the sen[illegible] made.

AS ENVOY TO FRANCE.

[illegible] Mr Adams succeeded to the chief mag[illegible] had occasion to appoint three envoys [illegible] of whom Marshall was one. The his[illegible] of the mission involves intricate details [illegible] cannot now be fully told. It will be [illegible] to say that Talleyrand, the most [illegible] unscrupulous of politicians proposed [illegible] the envoys should pay a large sum of [illegible] to the directory and thus purchase the [illegible] of an audience. Marshall maintained [illegible] of the United States by rejecting the [illegible]. He opposed integrity with straight[illegible] a public dinner was given to [illegible] of both houses of congress. It [illegible] dinner that the sentence "Millions [illegible] but not a cent for tribute," became [illegible] watchwords. [illegible] Washington was now spending his last days in [illegible] at Mount Vernon. He sent for Mar[illegible] urged him to [illegible] himself for [illegible]. While the canvass was progress[illegible] Adams offered him the vacant [illegible] of the supreme court. He de[illegible] because of his promise already given and was elected to the house of representatives which met in Philadelphia. His first duty in that assembly was to announce the decease of that great leader who had guided his people alike in war and in peace. In the next session, he engaged in the debate which arose out of Nash's surrender, which the president had advised. Nash was charged with killing a man on the high seas upon a vessel belonging to the British navy. The English government demanded his extradition for the purpose of trial. A resolution opposing the extradition were introduced into congress. Again Marshall took the unpopular side. His advocacy of it was so convincing, that M. Gallatin who had undertaken to reply to him made no answer.

CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES.

After a short term of office as secretary of state, Marshall was again invited to sit as chief justice of the United States. Ellsworth had resigned and Jay who had once occupied the seat declined to return to it. On the last day of January 1801 the commission was issued, which placed the subject of this sketch in the chair which thenceforth he occupied for more than a third of a century. He was 45 years of age and the greatest work of his busy life was about to begin.

The law (as Sir John Davis said 200 years ago) is nothing else but a rule which is made to measure the actions of men. But a rule is dead and men are nothing unless the hand of the architect to apply it. It is indeed an excellent instrument to make harmony and concord in the commonwealth but the best lute that ever was made could never make music of itself alone without the learned hand of the lute player. True as this remark is of the common law concerning which the first Irish reporter spoke it is eminently true when applied to the written constitution of the United States a rule to which no architect had laid his hand an instrument from which no musician had yet called forth harmony. Let us take a single instance as exemplifying the novelty of the experiment. It had been a familiar and fundamental principle, recognized by every lawyer, that what parliament did courts could not undo. The constitution however declared that the judicial power of the federal government shall cover all cases arising under its own articles and under the laws of the United States. What then would be the issue, if a state legislature or if congress should enact a statute contrary to the constitution? This vital question soon came up for decision in the case of Marbury vs Madison. Stripped of all accidents, the matter stood thus. The powers committed to the supreme court of the United States were sharply defined. It had received a jurisdiction in part original and in part appellate but in each department accurately limited. Congress passed an act purporting to bestow on the court a certain further original jurisdiction not specified in the constitution and the court was asked to exercise this power. The chief justice reduced the argument to what logicians call a dilemma. It is a proposition too plain to be contested that the constitution controls any legislative act repugnant to it or else that the legislature can alter the constitution by an ordinary act. The constitution is either a superior paramount law unchangeable by ordinary means, or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts. If the former part of the alternative be true, then a legislative act contrary to the constitution is not law. If the latter part be true then written constitutions are absurd attempts on the part of the people to limit a power in its own nature illimitable. If the enactment was valid, it altered the constitution. If the constitution was paramount the act was void. Thus it was clearly and forever determined that statutes contrary to the constitution were void and that the courts could declare them to be so.

NOVEL POINTS DECIDED.

It would be impracticable at this time to attempt any examination of particular matters decided by this master of the law during his long session on the supreme bench. Questions arose as to the status of the Indian tribes, as to the issuing of letters of marque as to the contract rights of individuals and corporations and the impairment of them by state laws, as to the power of congress to incorporate national banks; as to the power of a state to tax the machinery of the general government, as to the effects of the judgments of foreign tribunals. On these matters little or no light could be obtained from prior adjudication. The circumstances were unprecedented and the law expanded itself to meet them. Marshall's opinions were severe in logic and terse in form. In dealing with controversies of new impression, he marked out those lines from which his successors have seldom and slightly deviated. He was not merely a great judge as Lord St. Leonards and Chief Justice Shaw were great judges though each of these distinguished men towered high above his fellows. This point is well expressed by Mr W. H. Rawle in his oration on the unveiling of Marshall's statue at the national capital in 1884. He was great in the sense in which Nottingham and Hardwicke as to equity were great, in which Mansfield as to commercial law, and Stowell as to admiralty, were great; great in that with little precedent to guide them they produced a system with which the wisdom of succeeding generations has found little fault. There have been great judges before and since his time, but none had ever such opportunity, and none ever seized and improved it as he did. More strikingly even than Mansfield he applied the creative faculty that faculty which reduces chaos into order, to the topics of jurisprudence.

THE CASE OF AARON BURR.

One case indeed, tried on circuit at Richmond, demands a passing notice, both on account of its own picturesque interest and because of the characteristic attitude of the chief justice. This was the case of Aaron Burr. Burr as every one knows, was a man of graceful presence and brilliant genius but singularly lacking in moral sensibility. Like Absalom he ingratiated himself much with the people. Such a character as his was portrayed by Milton, in his celebrated description of Belial:

He seemed
For dignity composed and high exploit:
But all was false and hollow; though his tongue
Dropt manna and could make the worse appear
The better reason, to perplex and dash
Maturest counsels.

So he became vice president and narrowly missed the chief magistracy. After his duel with Alexander Hamilton in 1804, in which that patriotic statesman lost his life Burr found himself disliked and feared by many who had been his friends. Inflamed by the evil example of the First Napoleon he sought some new outlet for his adventurous spirit and planned a scheme for the invasion of Mexico at that time a colony of Spain. He assembled a small force on an island in the Ohio river intending to enlarge it into an army. But Jefferson who was then president, hearing of what had occurred issued a proclamation denouncing the conspiracy and Burr and several of his companions were arrested on the charge of high treason it being alleged that their real purpose was the dismemberment of the Union. On this charge Burr was tried in May 1807 public feeling being now hot against him.

That Aaron Burr was morally guilty of a great crime against the community is clear. That he meditated the dismemberment of the Union is possible. But that he did not bring himself within the constitutional definition of treason is abundantly evident. He had not levied war against the United States nor had he adhered to their enemies, whatever else of wrong he might have done. The chief justice charged the jury to the prisoner's favor and he was acquitted. This as the judicial duty was it needed a touch of heroism to perform it. Here was an opportunity of wielding the thunderbolt of public vengeance and of concealing within its ample verge the shaft of private retaliation. For Marshall was the friend of Hamilton whom Burr had ignobly killed and in planting the shield of the constitution between Burr and the scaffold Marshall knew that he must encounter the odium of the populace and the animosity of the president. Nevertheless, he stood like Teneriffe or Atlas unmoved through storm and tumult in the midst of threats and calumny he held the scales of justice with an absolutely even hand.

HE WAS A REMARKABLE MAN.

It has not been my purpose, gentlemen, to set before you the picture of that "faultless monster whom the world ne'er saw" and yet I have come near doing it by a kind of necessity. To admit that there were blemishes in the character of this eminent man is merely to say that he was human and that is to utter a truism. Whatever those faults may have been, they are clearly visible to Him alone in whose sight the heavens are not clean and who chargeth his angels with folly. There is a mysterious law, let philosophy explain it, in virtue of which galaxies of great men sharing in diverse measure the inspiration of a common genius appear from time to time in history. So it was in the age of Pericles, in the age of Leo the Tenth, in the age of Elizabeth, in the age of the American Revolution. Several of the founders of this republic seem to have possessed that peculiar type of manliness usually associated with the classic periods of Greece and Rome. There are traits in Washington which recall the brief and half legendary biography of Cincinnatus. Something of the fire of Demosthenes must have blazed in the philippics of Patrick Henry. We shall not very dangerously exaggerate in applying to Marshall what a great English dramatist has written perhaps with less cause of Germanicus, saying that

Pompey's dignity,
The innocence of Cato, Cæsar's spirit,
Wise Brutus's temperance and every virtue
Which, parted unto others gave them name,
Flowed mixed in him. He was the soul of goodness
And all our praises of him are like streams
Drawn from a spring that still rise full, and leave
The part remaining greatest.

AMERICA AND FRANCE.

This year of grace is a centenary year of two republics, the American and the French. Almost coeval in their origin they have both though in different ways disappointed the expectations of the wise. In the United States there has been gradually developed one of the most stable and conservative of governments, a government which every succeeding decade renders more secure. On this point it is instructive to observe the failure of adverse prophesyings not those of censorious men alone but of well wishers. Sydney Smith was by no means an enemy of free institutions or of the American Union yet these are his words written in 1818: "The Americans are a very sensible reflecting people and have conducted their affairs extremely well, but it is scarcely possible to conceive that such an empire should very long remain undivided or that the dwellers on the Columbia should have common interest with the navigators of the Hudson and the Delaware." About fifteen years later Coleridge assuredly no unfriendly critic questioned whether there could ever be in the [illegible] national fusion of the states (Table Talk, A D 1833). "The American Union" said he "has no center and it is impossible now to make one. The more they extend their borders into the Indians' land the weaker will the cohesion be. But I am contented. I look upon the states as splendid masses to be used by and by in the composition of two or three great governments." Let us not hastily attribute foolishness to the greatest wit and the great philosopher because of these forecasts. From their point of view the opinions thus recorded were probable and sagacious. Yet here we are. Imost in the strength of the Indians' land and on the borders of the Columbia, proclaiming at the [illegible] indissoluble union of indestructible states. Sydney Smith did not know, Coleridge did not know, what master builders were laying stone to stone in the solid fabric of American nationality.

It would be an interesting but perhaps an ungracious task, to institute a formal contrast at this time between the United States and France. Whatever the difficulties or the attractions of such an enterprise it would exceed the present limits and can not now be attempted. When the French nation shall finally organize a stable government, may their rise in its aid some statesman as patriotic as Hamilton some judge as incorruptible as Marshall! It is for us to rejoice in the shelter of that constitution of which the former was the chief framer and the latter the most illustrious expounder.

CONTRASTED ADMINISTRATIONS.

Reform of the civil service is not to be helped by dishonest expedients The mugwumps profess to be the special champions of this reform, yet they have dealt with it in a most insincere and hypocritical way and the discredit they have brought on themselves thereby unfortunately attaches in many minds to the reform itself Their dishonesty in dealing with the subject has presented two conspicuous phases First they approved all the partisan abuses of the Cleveland administration and held Cleveland himself up to admiration as the pink and perfection of reform, and second they are now savagely and unjustly attacking the Harrison administration as utterly unfaithful to the principles upon which the reform is based. George William Curtis of Harper's Weekly is the leader in this extremely partisan and wholly dishonest proceeding. His recent addresses before the Civil Service Reform League, an outline of which has been published by THE OREGONIAN shows him to be a thick-and-thin partisan of the last administration; and to make good this service he becomes an unfair critic and unjust assailant of the present one.

It is notorious that President Cleveland removed great numbers of republican officials, merely for partisan purposes This fact is verified by the knowledge of every citizen in his own community. Moreover, nearly all the democrats thus appointed to office under the Cleveland administration are still in office in this eighth month of Harrison's term Conspicuous examples in Oregon are the collector of internal revenue the United States marshal, and the collector of customs at Portland But when these men and thousands like them were appointed to offices from which republicans were removed, Mr Curtis had not one word of censure for Cleveland. On the contrary, the Cleveland administration was continually lauded by him and its other partisan supporters as the bright consummate flower of civil service reform.

Some of the branches of the public service notably the postoffice department had been filled under the Cleveland administration with men who were notoriously incompetent. These men had been appointed in obedience to the demand of democratic senators, representatives and party bosses, who wanted places for their political tools Competent men were displaced to make room for these bummers, and a loud outcry was raised in all parts of the country against the inefficiency of the public service. This cry found utterance through the democratic as well as the republican press. Some thousands of efficient men thus displaced by the Cleveland administration to make room for political bummers, have been restored to office under Harrison—mainly in subordinate positions in the postoffice department. But the superior positions in the Federal service in all departments are still occupied chiefly by the men whom Cleveland placed in them It is so in Oregon, it is so in every state. Mr Harrison has thus far kept his pledges in regard to the civil service much better than Mr Cleveland, but men like Curtis have not the honesty to acknowledge it As the New York Tribune well says "Mr Curtis and those who stand with him destroyed their influence with the vast majority of sincere friends of civil service reform by upholding President Cleveland in spite of his hypocrisy and his prostitution of the service to political and personal ends After that test of his sincerity true friends of reform concluded that they wanted no more of the kind of reform Mr Curtis approved It is a satisfaction to them to know that the so-called reformers who indorsed President Cleveland are not at all inclined to indorse President Harrison"

"PROHIBITION" IN MAINE

Professor W W Stetson, superintendent of public schools in Auburn Me., in a recent temperance address, described the open manner in which the prohibitory law is violated in Lewiston the second city of Maine, and an illegal license system substituted

Professor Stetson described this illegal license system by citing the case of a man whom he knew to have been head-over-heels in debt until he was appointed a member of the police force two or three years ago, while "to-day that man is living in a fine residence; he sports a team, his daughters are finely dressed, his parlor is furnished with a piano, his debts are paid—and all on a salary of $2 a day"

Lewiston, with a population in 1880 of only 19 083 has between 250 and 350 saloons which supply the wants not only of its own people, but those of the 9555 inhabitants of Auburn, which is just across the river from Lewiston. This population of about 30 000 therefore has 250 to 300 saloons or one for about every 100 men, women and children, which is twice as many in proportion to population as New York city

Professor Stetson said that what was true of Lewiston was true of all the other cities of Maine, of Portland and Bangor for examples He also called attention to the well-authenticated fact that "in three of the Maine cities," under a constitution which absolutely forbids the sale of liquor "there were wholesale liquor dealers who sold liquors to retail dealers under a guarantee that so long as these retail dealers sold only their liquors, they would be protected from arrest, search and seizure" This demoralizing situation of things under prohibition in Maine is contrasted with the license system in Michigan The legislature of that state of 1887 passed a law which allowed each county to decide for itself whether liquor should be sold and imposed a tax upon the dealers in those counties which voted to allow the sale Under this system many rural counties voted for prohibition, while those containing the chief cities voted to allow the sale This law was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court on technical grounds but the legislature of 1889 profited by the blunder of its predecessor to pass a new local option law which is believed to be constitutional beyond a doubt and as a companion to it a new tax law which applies to those counties that decide to allow the sale of liquor and fixes a minimum of $500 These laws went into effect last week and are heartily sustained by the people

UNJUST TO THE ARMY

L. W Alexander of Iowa, has recently been appointed, from civil life, U S commissary of subsistence with the rank of captain The president had a right under the law to appoint a civilian to this vacancy but it is a great injustice to the subalterns of the line who for twenty years have looked to the occasional vacancies in the quartermaster's and subsistence departments for higher rank and pay.

A civilian certainly has no claim over an army officer of many long years of hard service and small pay to these occasional vacancies in the staff departments President Harrison has imitated the action of President Cleveland, who, after refusing to make such appointments of civilians as contrary to public policy and to the spirit of the law, finally broke his record by making a civilian appointment.

For more than twenty years no appointments of civilians to the subsistence or quartermaster's departments have been made until this appointment of Alexander. The military service against the Indians from 1869 to 1879 was of a severe nature, and these first lieutenants who have been waiting, some of them twenty years for promotion, ought not to have been forgotten by the president. For the good of the army civilians ought not to be appointed to places of this sort, which ought to be used for recognizing exceptional brilliant gallant or useful services rendered by lieutenants on the frontier The principle that civilians are to be kept back from the army, except in appointments as surgeon or chaplain has been recognized by the law giving military academy graduates and meritorious enlisted men the preference over them for second lieutenants of the line

PERSECUTION OF THE NEGRO

Our dispatches yesterday announced that the republican candidates for governor and attorney general of Mississippi had withdrawn General Chalmers, the candidate for governor an ex Confederate soldier, who fought in every battle at the West from Shiloh to the surrender of the Confederate armies, asserts that an active canvass would only result in the murder of negroes General Chalmers is probably right for the most recent facts are strong assurance that he does not misjudge the temper and purpose of the white democracy of the South

Little more than a month has elapsed since twenty two negroes were slaughtered in one day in Le Flore county Mississippi on the pretense that they were about to inaugurate a race war In the Third Louisiana district, recently, the negroes were terrorized from the polls by the threat of being shot if they ventured to vote Among the contests to come before the next congress is that of Thomas E Miller, a colored republican who will contest the seat of William Elliott of South Carolina. This district is overwhelmingly republican, since it has but 7695 white voters and 32,833 colored, and yet the state board of canvassers returned a democrat by 1355 majority in a total vote of but 15 381 According to the law South Carolina election boards represent only one political party They are chosen by the governor who makes no provision for the minority In this district the supervisor kept the republicans from registering by keeping them in ignorance of the time and place of registration In eight precincts one of the ballot boxes was filled before the polls were opened with democratic ballots, twisted so as to be distinguished by touch At the close of the day there was an excessive number of ballots, and as required by law the democratic managers drew out one after another till the requisite number was left.

In Virginia the white democracy resort to the boycott and to false counting while in Louisiana, Mississippi Arkansas and even Georgia the methods are shooting negroes dragging them from their beds at midnight and whipping them, hunting them with a shotgun and robbing them of their political rights generally Nor is this persecution of the negro aimed merely against his admission to political place and the exercise of the right of suffrage Negroes who attempt to organize labor into industrial leagues and assemblies are shot down Some 20 000 negroes have quit work upon the Southern farms during the last two months, and are desirous of emigration to states where a negro is not hunted to death periodically by democratic whites Yet the flight of this persecuted labor is steadily resisted by those who have lashed them into a passion for expatriation. There are laws in Mississippi for the arrest trial and punishment of disturbers of the peace, conspirators and murderers and under these laws negroes are entitled to be tried by the courts just as in case of white outlaws but not even this slight justice is granted the negro, who is hunted down and shot in cold blood the moment any worthless white ruffian raises a cry of "race war" or "negro uprising" There is no dispute about these facts. The recent appeal of the conference of the African Methodist church for protection by the nation from continual persecution and frequent murder was supported by Bishop Turner and other able, intelligent and conservative men of color. The moment a negro ventures to talk about higher wages better schools etc he is marked down for destruction as a "political incendiary" or, as the ruffians who murder him say, 'a bad nigger"

What is the answer of the South to this indictment of the methods of her civilization in dealing with the negro? The answer is not encouraging, it begins to look as if things were likely to become a good deal worse before they are much better. Governor Lee of Virginia an educated man the son of a humane father, says "I am sorry to see the two races drifting apart in Virginia, but that is the unmistakable tendency They are getting farther apart every year, and there seems to be no hope of ever re-establishing cordial and kindly relations between them This is chiefly the fault of the colored people, and they will be the chief sufferers by it."

The Mississippi democratic state committee in their recent address, includes the assertion that "the flag of a Caucasian civilization must float triumphantly at the South as in every other section of this proud land and throughout Christendom" The 'flag of a Caucasian civilization' is about all of that civilization the South has thus far captured An educated Virginia democrat recently wrote the New York Press 'This is a white man's country the negro is growing more and more superstitious, the sooner he goes to work and stops trying to exercise the rights of citizenship, which are the white man's rights only, the better."

Another Southern answer to the appeal for a solution of the negro problem is the proposition of the author of 'An Appeal to Pharaoh' who would deport the whole seven million of negroes to Africa He would begin with the prolific women between the ages of twenty and thirty and would follow this up with the rest of the women, men and children

The entire business could be accomplished in ten years for $320,000 000 The absurdity of this plan largely lies in the fact that the South does not want to get rid of the negro it only wants to keep him a serf and a political nonentity The South could get rid of its negroes by withholding employment from them which would force them to emigrate to the trans Mississippi West The negro problem at the South will not be solved by deportation or chiefly by emigration of negroes to other states it will have to be solved in the section where it had its birth and by the people who have by their own barbarous methods made the problem difficult of solution The South will have to choose whether to continue its efforts to reduce the negro to a hereditary serf, blighted and stunted by ignorance and poverty or to help him by kind and just treatment up to the level of independent and self respecting labor The negro is in the South to stay and whether he becomes a bane and a blot upon its civilization or becomes an industrial blessing is something that the South must settle for itself The negro will cease to be a dangerous and disagreeable factor in the population of the South only when her leaders win his confidence by kind and just treatment under law Persistence in the present policy will make the negro nothing better than a degraded drunken helot, a dangerous class a desperate degraded impoverished people robbed by [illegible] always being [illegible] are prolific they are growing in [illegible]ce, and property if not in morality every year and the time is sure to come when their influence for good or evil will be felt. The danger of the [illegible] of the South ever repeating the horrors of San Domingo may perhaps be dismissed as improbable, but the presence of 7,000,000 of prolific people at the South will frightfully disfigure and demoralize her civilization if these seven millions are reduced by persecution to a race of degraded savage, vicious people The South can make the negro an outlaw a tramp, a criminal a beast a pauper, or it can make him a man But it will cost less to make him a man by treating him like a man than to make and keep him a serf a convict, a satyr a thief a drunken wasteful sluggish savage

A BENIGHTED PEOPLE.

A new race of people has it is said been discovered up in Alaska. They are said to be brave hardy they must be to endure the rigor of their native climate and thrive, and they are hospitable withal and treat strangers with kindness These are simple characteristics however, and are not those that lead curiosity to pause and view this new people with wonder and incredulity They are said to be absolutely without knowledge of any form of intoxicating liquor, but abide peacefully upon the banks of the Yukon river and drink contentedly of its waters This water may not, it is safe to say does not, have the strength and 'body' that distinguish that of the Willamette, making even the governor of the state champion it as a nourishing tipple 'quite good enough for him" yet these simple people are content to drink of it, and as far as reported, have never brewed any of the abominable stuffs from roots and berries that have caused other savage tribes to stumble dreamily upon the verge of civilization through the experience that comes with hilarity of evening and the morning's depression

Here, indeed, is an urgent, if a narrow field for missionary effort. One could pity and pass by the condition of the benighted heathen who had never known the exaltation that follows a personal acquaintance with Kentucky bourbon, but for a simple minded race, who have never concocted an intoxicating beverage out of such material as nature everywhere provides, something more than mere pity is due Civilization should send her vanguard thither at once. The first step toward progress has been taken in the discovery of these simple minded people and in the knowledge of their benighted condition Soon the agents of civilization will get there and see to it that they are not stinted in the matter of 'supplies" No doubt admission to knowledge of the secrets of nature and art will bring many of them to destruction but after all, it is only through knowledge that intellectual and moral progress can be made Yet upon those who have always been kept in darkness, too much sunlight should not be poured all at once However, to this race of people abiding yet in their ignorant innocence, the trader will probably succeed in spite of government restrictions, in conveying whisky enough to give them an introduction to the mystery of good and evil It is an apparent paradox of moral reform that the step upward is preceded by the step downward, and yet that all must beware of the downward step

The Philadelphia Ledger the most conservative of journals calls attention in its quiet, but forcible way to the recent accident near Palatine Bridge on the New York Central, in which two 'presidents' cars played the most surprising part of coming out of the wreck unscathed, while the splinters of the ordinary passenger coaches of the express train were strewn about, with the mutilated remains of a number of the passengers. One of these private cars was strong enough to resist the onset of the huge locomotive of the express train, and the other was so much stronger than the ordinary sleeper as to be able to telescope it and kill three passengers' while its own occupants were unhurt The public is quite ready to agree with the Ledger that the question whether cars provided for the public shall not be made as strong as the 'private cars' is an important one and one that claims an affirmative answer from humanity No one complains that the presidents, vice presidents, general managers, superintendents and the lesser officials of the road travel in securely built cars strong enough to defy the ordinary accidents of travel, but human nature, being selfish, feels that as much surety as is possible should be given to the general public who commit their lives to the keeping of these officials and their employes for a price.

The people of Vermont and New Hampshire are working in an energetic and practical way to secure immigrants of a desirable class to make good some of their losses by the contribution of their inhabitants to the civilization of the Great West They do not hope to draw any of these people back, but they expect to arrest in transit, Scandinavians, Finns and other frugal industrious people who come to America seeking homes, and give them so much better in locating them upon the 'abandoned farms' of the state than that to which they have been accustomed in their native land that they may be happy and content to remain These people are a desirable adjunct to a rural population having none of the objectionable features that attach to them when settling in swarms about mining districts, and are considered just the people that rural New England needs to recruit the ranks in her population, depleted by the heavy drafts made upon them by the West and Northwest.

The resolve of the New York supreme court to hear all divorce trials in open court is a sound decision as it prevents the shameful frauds that are not seldom perpetrated upon the innocent party by secret proceedings For many years the ablest jurists in this country have declared that secret divorce proceedings were contrary to public policy and the fertile parent of fraudulent divorces There is no argument in favor of secret divorce proceedings that will bear examination The cause of the action of the New York judges is found in the Flack case, where by a conspiracy consisting of the referee Sheriff Flack, his counsel and a court officer the sheriff obtained a fraudulent divorce from his wife who had never made application for divorce, although she was made to appear as the petitioner.

The average number of fires in New York city is about seven a day throughout the year About one half of these are due to defects in heating apparatus chimneys, stoves and boilers and the other half to electric lights gas and the use of coal oil The number of incendiary fires in the city is comparatively few The fire department is so thoroughly equipped and the drill and efficiency so perfect that great fires are seldom recorded in that city though the aggregate loss foots up a somewhat startling total at the end of the year

Fairweather republican candidate for senator in Lincoln county Washington is elected after all He has a majority of eleven in a total vote of 1363 So the democrats have elected only one senator in Washington

Polk county has succeeded in reducing her assessment by about $100,000 below that of last year though her actual valuation is undoubtedly very much greater

COREA AND CHINA.

The Relations Existing Between the Legations of the two Countries

WASHINGTON Oct 9—Dr Allen foreign secretary to the Corean embassy is expected to start on a business trip to Corea in regard to matters for the legation He will stop in Ohio a few days to see his family and will then proceed to San Francisco taking the first steamer to Hong Kong

In a conversation about the relations existing between the Corean and Chinese legations here and the rumor that the United States proposed sending an envoy to investigate the situation as to the exact relations of the two countries he says "I wish they would and then set at rest all these idle rumors but if there is such a step contemplated we have no information from the state department to that effect. We certainly would be consulted in regard to the matter The only mention I have heard of it was from Admiral Shufeldt, who it is intimated is to be sent on the delicate mission which is rather suggestive The retired Chinese minister was on the very best of terms with our legation, and there has not been any mention lately of any objection to Corea having a representative there. As to the new minister and Prince Pak there is the most cordial friendship existing between them even more than was with his predecessor I think that all of the present discussion springs from the meddlesome activity of a citizen of the United States in the employ of the Corean government They are just about finding him out, and will no doubt soon dispense with his peculiar service"

DEATH BY ELECTRICITY.

The New York Law Decided To Be Constitutional

AUBURN N Y Oct 9—Judge Day decides that the electrical execution law is constitutional and remands Kemmler to the custody of the warden of Auburn prison.

The decision, which is quite lengthy, says in part that to every legislative act there attaches a presumption of constitutionality, and the burden of showing it to be unconstitutional is upon him who assails it. No such acts should be annulled by the judiciary as opposed to fundamental law in a doubtful case.

The questions are, whether the prisoner has overcome the presumption of constitutionality and has shown that the statute of 1888 in regard to the infliction of the death penalty provides a cruel and unusual and therefore unconstitutional punishment and that the force of electricity is sufficient to kill any human subject with celerity and certainty when scientifically applied. In my judgment these questions must be answered negatively Before a statute can rightly be abrogated there should be judicial knowledge that the punishment therein provided is cruel and unusual. There is no such knowledge, and his contention fails."

DISEASE lies in ambush for the weak feeble constitution is ill adapted to encounter a malarious atmosphere and sudden changes of temperature, and the least robust are usually the easiest victims. Dr J H McLean's Sarsaparilla will give tone, vitality and strength to the entire body

GETTING THERE.

The success of West Portland is not problematical since it is an assured fact that C W Brown has taken the contract to complete the West Portland motor line on or before February 10 1890 except the laying of the rails. The purchasers will have commutation tickets of 5 cents fare over this line The Home Builders Association with a capital of $50 000 propose to build fifty houses in West Portland within the next ten or twelve months. A contract has also been made with some millmen to establish a sawmill in West Portland. It is a noted fact that for beauty of situation, view and healthfulness West Portland is equal, if it does not excel any other suburb and if West Portland is not on top, it is getting there very fast. 10otf*

WORKING OUT THE BARS.

Very Effective Work Rendered by the Dredge Along the Lower River.

The damages received by the government dredge at St. Helens bar from the steam collier Willamette running into her, are not so serious as at first supposed The estimated cost of repairs is $600, but it will take nearly two weeks before she will be ready for service again which is rather unfortunate considering that she had only one more day's work to do to complete the improvement at St Helens

The city dredge has done splendid work at Postoffice bar and will be through there this month. This, with the channel completed by her at Swan island bar will put an end to all trouble about low water in the Willamette river In doing this, the dredge has done the city a greater benefit than will ever be conferred on her by those who endeavored to have her thrown away as no good, and also have growled at paying for the repairs rendered necessary by their own carelessness in not properly looking after her

As soon as she is through at Postoffice bar she will be sent down to cut a channel at Martin's island 3000 feet long and 150 feet wide with a depth of twenty two feet at the lowest stage of water This done there will never be any more trouble about ships coming to Portland or carrying away a full cargo

IMPROVEMENTS IN LIGHTING

The Close Connection That a Perfect Engine Bears to Electric Lighting

There is nothing on which there is more dependence placed in the conducting of a large electric light plant than the engine furnishing the motive power An ease and reliability in movement together with a perfect regulation, is always sought for in an engine desired for this purpose, and by long experience practical electric light men now feel no hesitancy in declaring that the Russell High Speed Automatic engine is the best adapted engine in the world for this purpose. Among those who are to-day using this fine piece of machinery may be mentioned the Tacoma Light & Water Company, who have eight in constant use with a combined capacity of 860 horse Barnkoff & Allen, of McMinnville N H Allen the proprietor of the electric light plant at Albany, the St Paul & Tacoma Lumber Company of Tacoma, who are using one of 150-horse power, and J H Jones & Co, of this city This engine is superior in the direction of power, regulation economy and durability and for work of all kinds is not excelled by any engine manufactured in the world

THE UNDERTAKERS' FEAST.

Mayor DeLashmutt Welcomes the Funeral Directors to the City—L. W. Bonney, of Seattle, Elected President.

There were forty-four undertakers in Grand Army hall when President A P DeLin called the third annual convention of the Northwest Funeral Directors Association to order at 10 A. M. yesterday. They represented a gruesome calling, but they were not a gruesome looking set of men; they were well dressed and well fed and they looked happy and contented. They do not care a snap who wields the pen or the sword, so long as they furnish the shrouds and coffins.

The day's business was begun with prayer by Rev Alfred Kummer pastor of Taylor street M. E. church.

THE MAYOR'S WELCOME

Mayor DeLashmutt then delivered the address of welcome. He invited the assembled directors to visit the many points of interest which he enumerated and taking up the threadbare story that Portland has seen its best days he drove nails into its coffin in this fashion:

In short, we invite you to our city filled with life with the bustle of public and private enterprise and the hum of our machinery and the whistle of our river and ocean fleet, and the rattle and roar of our numerous railroads will convince you that you will not just yet be able to officiate at the obsequies of our body corporate. No gentlemen we have scarcely emerged from our swaddling clothes—not a week passes but we are forced to let a tuck out of our corporate pants and loosen our vest strings and ever and anon we stretch our limbs in the morning and a suburban sprig drops into our laps to swell our numbers and add to our influence and importance. We have just taken a new lease of life, turned over a new leaf, as it were, pulled off our coat and rolled up our sleeves and do not even require the services of a doctor, and an undertaker would simply be superfluous. Our waters abound in live fishes, our workshops are filled with live mechanics, our streets are crowded with live people, our mountains are covered with live forests, and nowhere will you find evidences of decay or putrefaction, or even a prospective victim, and while we do not wish to be uncivil, discourteous or inhospitable to you still we invite you to make your stay among us as pleasant as possible and, after a brief sojourn, we ask you to move on—go South or East and locate in the drouth-stricken portions of Kansas or Nebraska, in the frost-stricken portions of Minnesota or Iowa, in the deluge-stricken portions of the Allegheny mountains or in the boom-stricken portions of southern California.

O. H. Harlan of Tacoma, responded.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The association then went to work. The following officers were elected: President, L. W. Bonney, of Seattle; first vice-president E. B. Fellows McMinnville; second vice-president, Charles Howard Victoria; secretary C J Crandall, The Dalles; treasurer, Wm Michell The Dalles; directors H Cooke, Edward Holman, John Garnold, Geo H River, Geo. Dunning, of Portland; W H Bingham, McMinnville; Henry Barber East Portland; delegate to the national convention, Edward Holman, of Portland.

THE BANQUET

The convention re-assembled at 7:30 P. M. and elected to meet in Portland next year. This work finished the delegates made their way through the downpour to Baum, Brandes & Co's where covers had been laid for 100 banqueters. The tables were loaded with all kinds of good things. Here and there were caskets filled with candies and fruits, then bouquets and in front of the president's chair stood a pound cake weighing fifty pounds, moulded into the form of a black casket. On the center of the south table was a schooner resting on a flower bed the whole composed of smilax, roses, heliotropes, carnations and geraniums. In front of each diner was a boutonniere and two menus, one of the usual kind, and the other of a kind that only a committee of funeral directors can get up. On the outside was a picture of a coffin with the lid along side of it. Here is the menu in full:

TOASTS AND RESPONSES.

The dinner service was soon at an end and the next two or three hours were spent in listening to toasts and songs. All of the speeches were of a witty nature and kept the banqueters in a jolly good turn of mind. Mayor DeLashmutt's addresses were full of scriptural quotations and allusions and kept everybody in a roar. Counsellor William Foley took Mr Harry Adams's place on the programme and sang [illegible] as well as a severe cold would permit him. Professor P Sabati's selections were capital. His representation of a fireworks display was exceedingly ludicrous and filled everybody with enthusiasm. His Italian and French songs were very good. Appended is the regular programme of the evening:

City of Portland, Our Headquarters. Mayor Van B DeLashmutt.
Tyrolean song. Professor P Sabati.
The Northwest, Our Field of Labor. Colonel J McCraken.
The Press. Our Enlighteners. Mr Lucius Bigelow.

Song. Professor P Sabati.

OFF HAND REMARKS.

Mr Edward Holman read an amusing letter from Mr Robert W. Mitchell, of THE OREGONIAN who had been invited to address the undertakers. It was received with cheers.

District Attorney McGinn finally responded to loud calls for a speech, and said a few words that invoked a round of applause.

A B Rabbeson, of Olympia, told an interesting story of pioneer days that was enriched with reminiscences. He also told several amusing stories of his experiences as an undertaker. His last one threw the banqueters into convulsions.

Remarks were also made by A. P. DeLin, E. B. Fellows, of McMinnville who, in behalf of the visiting undertakers, returned thanks to the committee of arrangements for the evening's entertainment, William Foley, O. H. Harlan, George H. River, J. P. Finley, K. D. Williams, of Pocatello.

Professor Sabati then gave a comic representation of a young man smoking his first cigar. It was realistic to the extreme and the facial expressions were irresistible.

A P DeLin then entertained the banqueters with a few stories of his experience as a funeral director. That was the end of the banquet.

A DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

INDIANAPOLIS Oct 9—The completed returns of yesterday's municipal election show a sweeping victory for the democrats. They elect the mayor, clerk and a majority of the council, while the board of aldermen is now a tie. The republicans had a majority in the last council and board. This is the first election of a democratic mayor in fifteen years and the democrats are jubilant.

EAST PORTLAND WATER CO

CAMPBELL HOPES HE IS THE UNKNOWN

He Can Get Lots of Backing for a Fight With La Blanche

The sporting men are speculating as to who is the unknown whom the California Athletic Club has matched to meet George La Blanche, in February. Some think Jack Dempsey is the man, others pick out Toff Wall, the English middleweight champion, a few say young Mitchell, of San Francisco, and many say Dave Campbell is the man. Since Dempsey's defeat Dave has expressed his willingness to meet the Marine.

"Who do you think the unknown is?" asked a reporter of Campbell yesterday.

"I do not know" he said. "I do hope I am the lucky one."

If Campbell is ever matched against the Marine, he will be heavily backed by the Portland sports. He can have backing for $10,000 for a fight with La Blanche so a friend of his claims.

THE REAL AND POETICAL.

Something About Falling Leaves, Rain, Mud and the "Mazy Art"

When the leaves begin to turn and the rains begin to fall and the roads begin to be muddy the inhabitants of the rural districts begin to indulge in balls and dancing parties. There was a grand ball out near Sandy postoffice Tuesday night, which was largely attended and greatly enjoyed by the residents in that vicinity. Persons who went from this city to attend the festivity returned yesterday looking somewhat water logged but still happy. It seems strange to some that others can derive so much pleasure from shaking their massive feet in the giddy dance, but the poet who wrote the following lines knew how it was himself:

My wife shall dance and I will sing,
And so merry we'll pass the day
For I hold it is one of the wisest things
To drive dull care away.

FORTUNE SMILED GAYLY.

A short time ago a number of ladies, of one family, at Hollister in this state, formed a club the purpose of which was to woo Dame Fortune to smile upon them. With this view they jointly purchased a one twentieth part of ticket No 8 [illegible] in the Louisiana State Lottery and with fluttering expectation awaited the drawing. On the 13th of August last they were almost thrown into joyful hysterics over the news that No 8 [illegible] had drawn the capital prize. The ticket was placed in the hands of Wells Fargo & Company at Hollister to which agent J. G. Shaw the Anglo-Californian bank of this city paid $15,000, which Mr Shaw paid to the following ladies forming the club: Mrs Emma Shaw, Mrs William Shaw, Mrs George Shaw, Mrs Rody Shaw, Mrs. B. T. Child, Mrs Etta Sowels, Mrs E. E. Moore, Mrs William Wallace, Mrs James A. [illegible], Miss Laura Roach, Miss Nellie Powers, Miss [illegible] Moore, Mrs A. D. Shaw, Mrs J. H. Steigle, Miss Hattie Backus, Miss Ella Davis, Miss Maggie Meadows and Miss May Mahoney.

Dame Fortune did not stop with these ladies but smiled also upon San Francisco where a gentleman who refuses to allow his name to be made public held another twentieth part of No 8 [illegible] and who on the presentation of the same to the Anglo-California bank had his worldly stores increased to the extent of $15,000 in gold.—San Francisco (Cal) Examiner Sept [illegible]

CHARGED WITH TRESPASS

Robinson donation which they allege belong to them. The case was to have come up before Justice Tuttle yesterday, but the matter was put over until next Monday.

Mr Bryan one of the defendants, showed an OREGONIAN reporter a map of the land in dispute. He claims that his wife and not the sisters, owns the property. He says that by a recent decision his wife was awarded certain acreage property on Robinson's hill, and that he proceeded to fence it in when the sisters objected and threw every obstacle in his way. Mr Bryan further said that at considerable expense he had the land in dispute surveyed and that he is having the fence put up in accordance with the survey; that he does not want an inch of property that is not rightfully his but that he will not give an inch.

THE OREGONIAN reporter who talked with Gross after the shooting was put on the stand to testify that Gross said he knew nothing of the row and did not know who was shot or who did the shooting.

The case was given to the jury at 4:30. At [illegible] a verdict of assault with a dangerous weapon was returned. Gross was indicted for assault with intent to kill.

DALLAS IMPROVING

Electric Light—New Buildings—A Land Corporation Making Things Lively

DALLAS Oct. 8 1889

County court is now in session.

The heavy rains have caused building to be retarded.

A new cupola has been placed on the Dallas foundry.

There is a growing demand that our main street be graded, as the fall rains render it very disagreeable to pedestrians.

The growth of Dallas during the present year has been phenomenal when compared with that of former years. The court-house contest undoubtedly exercised a very stimulating effect, as it awakened our dormant energies, and devoted them to a good purpose. The county seat question is settled. The prospect before us is encouraging.

Our prominent fellow townsman T. J. Hayter leaves to-morrow afternoon for a short pleasure trip to Seattle and Victoria, B. C.

Messrs Riley and [illegible] are going ahead with the electric light business. They propose to put in a plant down by the machine shops. The city has agreed to take several lights, and nearly all of the business men will do likewise.

John J Daly, J F Groves, M M Ellis, J U Crider, C O Coad and W I Wright have organized themselves into an association to be known as the Dallas Land and Improvement Company with a capital stock of $40,000, and steps are now being taken to incorporate. The above named gentlemen recently bought a large tract of land south of town for $6,000, which will be laid out in town lots. This is the fourth addition to Dallas this summer.

AN HISTORICAL LANDMARK.

Interesting Facts Concerning the Stark Street Ferry.

The Busy Throngs That Cross Upon Its Deck—Few Accidents—Profit Yielded—A Good Place to Study Human Nature

Portland is standing upon the hill tops viewing from afar the dawn of that prosperity which the future has in store for her. Of all the ancient landmarks that have been silent witnesses of the growth of this city from a logging camp to an enterprising and influential center of social and commercial life none is so prominent or well known as the Stark street ferry.

If the ferry was gifted with the power of speech it would be able to relate a tale full of romance concerning the dead hopes of Milwaukie as a rival. More prolific than Dickens it would tell "A Tale of Four Cities," and tell it graphically and well. The Stark street ferry is one of the oldest institutions of Portland and whenever the names of Portland and East Portland are heard the Stark street ferry is a thought [illegible] inseparably connected therewith. The ferry first had its landing on this side of the Willamette at the foot of Oak street but as Stark street was beginning to be the most central and was shorter, the landing was changed to the latter street where it has been ever since.

Since its establishment it has witnessed a village rapidly develop into a city and from a city to a metropolis, and has witnessed the erection of bridges both above and below it, which together with its own ferries, render the fact of a river intervening scarcely obvious to the masses who have business on either side.

The greater part or rather a great part of the laboring class who work on the west side live either in East Portland or Albina, and every morning and evening witnesses a scene of busy life at the pontoon of this ferry that would be worthy of a much larger city. The laborer in his overalls, the shop girls with their lunch baskets and solid business looking young men of which no Eastern city can boast a better representation, together with merchants in their vehicles all eager in the pressing throng to be first on board and to cross over to either their homes or business. Not only is the transit heavy at the beginning and closing of the working hours of the day but it is kept up in a steady stream throughout, rendering the necessity of trips every ten minutes.

Why if this ferry was to meet with a mishap so as to occasion a tie up the inconvenience and delay consequent would be almost incalculable to those who have for so many years been accustomed to come and go by way of Stark street. If a person wished to ride to the other side as they do when on the ferry and they were willing to wait it would take the line of cars on the Morrison street bridge almost two hours to transfer the working class that cross every evening at 6 o'clock not to attempt to figure on the delay that it would cause the small army that maintain the transit during the other hours. It can be plainly seen that Portland and East Portland are made so deeply interested in a business as well as a social way that instead of being two cities she should be under one council for the betterment of both, for their wants and aims will always be identical.

The ferry being such an old established one your reporter concluding that in its thirty years of operation it could not be entirely bereft of events so he paid a visit to the pilot house. He found the pilot who is also engineer for he carries a license for both, at home and had quite a talk with him. When he was asked if he had ever met with any mishaps or accidents while he had been acting in his present capacity he answered with a laconic "Naw. Have been here six year and have never met with any kind of an accident yet." "Well that's peculiar. I must think you [illegible] take precaution to have been so lucky."

"Yes of course we have always to be on the lookout to guard against accidents, and it is only by our persistent carefulness that we owe our good luck so far. We have to slow down every time [illegible] of those little Albina boats. They sometimes don't seem to care whether they have a collision or not; they would just as leave run into a fellow as look at him. If ever they did run into us they would split themselves wide open while it would not harm us in the least, for this boat is so bulky, and besides she has two distinct hulls. As for that matter, we often give preference to many of the large river steamers by slowing down for them. No we don't use the red and green light system of signalling. We just use the whistle. One toot means to the right and two toots to the left. The colored lights are only used by the river steamers, that not only go across but go up and down the river to the larboard and to the starboard and every other way, while we never get turned around; have to follow the cable you know. Every steamer on the river of course knows where we are and in foggy weather are always on the lookout for us, and whistle."

"About how much does it cost per day to run a ferry like this?"

"Well it costs all of $25 for the twenty four hours; you see we run day and night and during that time we make about 100 trips which would you see bring the cost to 25 cents per trip. It costs $9 a day for wood alone. It doesn't take so much help; in the daytime it takes three men to run her but at night two men do it without any inconvenience. This boat has been in use but four years and cost $[illegible],000; that other boat over there that is tied up, when new cost $30,000 also. She was condemned four years ago after ten years of service on account of defective hulls when this one was built to take its place."

"During these thirty years this line must have made lots of money for her owners" was asked.

"Well I should say so. The company was first started in the early days of the pioneers by a man named [illegible] since deceased, who after holding it a good many years sold out to another man by the name of Stephens who in turn disposed of it to J. [illegible] Knott, all of them retiring with independent fortunes. The half of the plant was sold not long since for $7[illegible]00."

"The ferry is now owned by a stock company. The Willamette Iron Works, being principal, with [illegible] controlling one-half interest, J. Knott controlling one third and Mr Levi Knott one sixth. The entire plant could not now be bought for $100,000. I tell you the company that's got this ferry has a fortune and always will have, more so than its former owners, for as the city grows older the heavier the business, and besides its location is the most central as well as the shortest of other lines and being the oldest line of transit will always control a great majority of the patronage that binds two cities as one."

The dark flowing waters of the river [illegible] possess a peculiar attraction for the would be suicide. In years past a few instances are dimly remembered of men who sought to shake off the grip of life by jumping into the Willamette from the deck of the old ferry. Some succeeded and some were rescued. There have also been cases where men have accidentally fallen overboard. Always an attempt was made to save them which usually succeeded.

There are few places better adapted for the study of human nature than the ferry that [illegible] swings back and forth from bank to bank. Walt Whitman the great living poet of [illegible] Camden N. J. which is divided from Philadelphia by the Delaware river [illegible] the ferry and ride back and forth between the cities for hours studying men and nature, conversing with the boatmen, meeting friends with dogs and horses, chatting gaily and cheerfully with all who sought his advice or friendship. Of course the crowds that cross our Willamette are comparatively small but human nature is just the same in London, Paris, Philadelphia or Portland. Misery rubs against gay good nature, rebukes it and [illegible] side by side in the ferry [illegible] to make the throbbing, bustling busy world.

A REGIMENT OF KNIGHTS.

The Uniformed Rank of This Order Organizes a Battalion.

A Big Day at Astoria—Five Divisions Represented—Election of Officers—Grand Annual Ball.

Tuesday was a big day at Astoria. The elegant steamer T. J. Potter in command of Captain Archie Pease, (captain Pope at the wheel), brought a valuable cargo from Portland. The Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias were to organize into a state battalion and the steamer carried about 200 members of the order to the city by the sea where the auspicious ceremonies were to take place.

The boat arrived at Astoria at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, having left Portland the evening before. All of the passengers with the exception of about twenty, had enjoyed the luxury of a nap so when Astoria was reached the visitors separated, some going to one hotel others to another, all bent on seeing what they could of the city.

The elements evidently were not in sympathy with the occasion for a steady, drizzling rain was the order of the day. This excessive precipitation of "Oregon mist" detracted much from the pleasure of the visitors. Five divisions and about twenty nine lodges were represented.

At 10 o'clock in the forenoon the knights assembled in the K. of P. hall, where they proceeded to formally organize by the election of officers. The choice for commander fell upon Mr Ward S. Stevens of Portland who was elected lieutenant colonel. George W. Hochstadler of Albany was elected major and E. R. Irving, of La Grande surgeon. The following staff was appointed by the lieutenant colonel: Adjutant E. S. Edwards; quartermaster Alex Campbell; sergeant major F. R. Neal; quartermaster sergeant O. F. Bell.

The grand dress parade which was to have taken place at 1 o'clock in the afternoon was dispensed with on account of the rain.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the knights, visitors and citizens in general assembled in the opera house where the presentation of the regimental flag, and other exercises were to take place. The center of the floor was cleared for the knights in uniform while the spectators occupied seats around the sides and in the boxes. The hall was profusely decorated with evergreen, red white and blue bunting and American flags. A large banner hung across the stage bore this inscription: "In Friendship we welcome you."

The exercises were opened with music, the Western Amateur band, of Astoria under the leadership of A. W. Utzinger playing an appropriate air. The First Regiment drum corps (Portland's crack drummer boys) under command of J. A. Watson responded.

Grand Chancellor W. T. Hume, of Portland then presented the newly organized battalion their first color standard—the regimental banner—which they were enjoined to guard sacredly and follow it on to victory. The flag is of heavy red silk 5 feet by 6 feet 8 inches, and is richly ornamented with gilt letters and trimmings. It bears the inscription "First Regiment Uniform Rank Oregon K. of P." and also the seal of the state, colors of the uniformed rank, and insignia of the order.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ward Stevens accepted the gift on behalf of the regiment and placed it in the hands of the color guard. They marched to the front of the hall and back again bearing the flag aloft so that it could be seen by all present.

The uniformed ranks under their respective commanders and also under command of the lieutenant colonel were then put through a number of military maneuvers with side arms. The movements were well executed, but lacked precision and unanimity, which owing to lack of practice has not yet been acquired.

The band struck up America, after which A. A. Cleveland delivered the opening address. His remarks were expressed with much feeling. Pointing to the banner above the stage, he said: "What more can I say? If words could express all that the heart feels, I could perhaps welcome you better." He paid a touching tribute to the memory of Comrade Golden, a member of the Astoria lodge who has passed to the great beyond and closed with a beautiful poem illustrative of the general truism that man's greatest virtues are always known better after he has passed away.

Grand Chancellor Hume very happily responded. "Our presence here" said he "is sufficient evidence of our appreciation of your kind welcome. We anticipated a knightly welcome and this we have received. We remain here only long enough to bid you farewell, still the memory of this happy occasion and your royal welcome shall ever linger with us and as we gather at the altars of our castle halls we shall ever pray that God may bless and prosper the knights of Astoria and Pacific—the knights of Astoria and their friends."

Music followed.

Hon C. H. Finn the orator of the grand lodge was not able to be present and at his request the address that was to have been delivered by him was read by Miss Durbin. Miss Durbin is an elocutionist of no little talent and she delivered the well written address with great feeling. Her clear, resonant voice has that flexibility that enables her to portray every sentiment with feeling and [illegible] of it with [illegible] and action. At the close of the address Miss Durbin was presented with a beautiful bouquet. This closed the exercises of the afternoon.

Tuesday evening the opera house was lit up for the grand annual ball. The floor was carefully waxed and the large room had the appearance of an ever-changing panorama of beautiful feminine faces, sweet smiles, knightly uniforms, and graceful movements keeping time with terpsichorian music. About one hundred couples participated in the grand march and several hundred danced during the evening. Conspicuous among the trippers of the light fantastic toe were the Portland drummer boys. Dancing was continued until a late hour, lunch being served at 11 o'clock.

A portion of the delegates returned to Portland yesterday while the rest remained to assist in the clam bake which was to take place last night, and in other proceedings that are yet to come.

The Potter did not leave Astoria until 7 o'clock in the morning, arriving in Portland at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The drum corps and a number of Portland business men were anxious to get back sooner but as the saying is, "If wishes were horses beggars would ride, etc."

LONDON GRAIN LETTER

[illegible] London correspondent of the Northwestern [illegible] writing under date of September 18 says: [illegible] harvest in this country is not yet finished [illegible] rapidly drawing to a close. The weather [illegible] the past two weeks has been very fair [illegible] the condition of the new wheat [illegible] of very heavy yields in this [illegible] and England which are however offset to [illegible] by the reports of deceptive outturns [illegible] important wheat growing countries along [illegible] coast. Altogether I repeat that [illegible] which we do not expect to appear until [illegible] or December will show a [illegible] 000 bushels. Several interesting [illegible] developed within the past week. First [illegible] publication of the official estimate of the [illegible] wheat crop, which has been expected to [illegible] 316,000,000 and 330,000,000 bushels, but [illegible] proves to be only 266,510,000 bushels or in [illegible] 14,677,[illegible] bushels of sixty pounds. Last [illegible] finally proves to have been [illegible] 000 bushels. Thus the present crop is over [illegible] bushels larger than that of last year. The [illegible] consumption of wheat in France [illegible] the past four years comes out according [illegible] stocks and imports at about [illegible] 000 bushels [illegible] in round figures 25,000,000 bushels [illegible] to be imported to fill the [illegible] stocks [illegible] being too low to bear much [illegible]. This, it can safely be said [illegible] minimum requirement for [illegible] when [illegible] was actually larger than it [illegible] year, [illegible] 000,000 bushels were imported [illegible] have been said to require more [illegible] expected a [illegible] favor [illegible]. Now we find that the [illegible] was thought [illegible] actually [illegible]. [illegible] received this week to [illegible] age at 104,000,000 [illegible] may safely be inferred [illegible] Italy will [illegible] foreign wheat during this season at least [illegible] bushels, having [illegible] estimated about 25,000,000 [illegible] the supplementary fact [illegible] crop is turning out to be only 45,000,000 [illegible] instead of over 60,000,000 bushels as had [illegible] predicted. We have sufficient reason [illegible] of wheat should show more [illegible] instead they have done. The effect [illegible] of buyers, however, is practically [illegible] and the most that can be said is that prices have been fairly maintained. Another reason why holders should feel satisfied that present prices are low enough is that the quantity afloat for the United Kingdom continues to decrease, being now 18,300,000 bushels wheat and flour, against 16,650,000 bushels last year. Adding the quantity afloat to the American visible supply the aggregate is 81,600,000 bushels, against 56,600,000 bushels at this time last year, while the Russian shipments of wheat, which have for some time kept the market in check, have during the past two weeks averaged only about 1,075,000 bushels per week, after having averaged 1,872,000 bushels all through the previous season. At the same time our supplies have been so liberal lately that during the past four weeks our stocks have been increased by about 2,500,000 bushels. While in fact present supplies are so liberal prices will be difficult to maintain, and it is to be expected that for some weeks at least new English wheat will be in large supply. No. 1 Californian off the English coast is to-day worth 35s per 500 pounds and prompt shipments 34s 6d. Red winter is held too high by American shippers, and our millers are afraid of quality, as they notice that the inspection at Chicago for some weeks past has shown that only 10 to 20 per cent. grades as high as No. 2.

The usually well informed Bradstreet's of New York has been sadly misled by its London correspondent with regard to the probable net deficiency in the European crops, which he puts for the continent alone at 40,000,000 bushels more than last year. As a matter of fact, and leaving aside Austria-Hungary, which will be neither an importer nor an exporter this season, the requirements from abroad of the continental importing countries (excluding of course England) this season will not be more than 104,000,000 bushels, against 132,000,000 bushels actually imported last year. The strike of the London dock laborers, which lasted about a month, is happily now over, but there will be friction for some time yet. Business has been almost suspended in London for some weeks past owing to this strike, and 150,000 to 200,000 bags of American flour have been lying in the river for some time, unable to be discharged. Meanwhile the flour trade has been extremely dull, and lower prices have had to be accepted. For forward delivery there is absolutely no inquiry although American shippers have further reduced their pretensions. Spring wheat patents are now obtainable at 27s 6d@28s 6d c. i. f., while Hungarian patents are held at 31s 6d@33s 6d c. i. f. The latter are much too dear for our millers, and there is little or nothing doing for export from Hungary.

The Merchandise Market.

The general condition of and outlook for trade was never better. The San Francisco Commercial News, in its regular weekly review, says:

The annual inundation of ships occurred this week, the fleet over due, fully due, and the ships hardly due all came in through the Golden Gate together, and brought coal from Australia and all sorts of general merchandise from Europe and Atlantic ports of this country. The harbor yesterday presented a busier scene than has before been witnessed for some time. Some classes of goods were anxiously awaited and nothing has come to hand that will unfavorably affect rates. The business of the past week has not shown any improvement over its predecessors, nor have any startling changes been made in prices.

During the week the local refineries have each reduced the rate of sugar ⅛@¼c per pound, probably in sympathy with the decline in the East, where the Trust seems to be in a bad way. Two cargoes arrived at this port from Manila within the past few days, one to Spreckels and one to Havemeyer & Elder. The charter of the steamer Glenelg has been canceled. She was under engagement to load at Java for the latter firm.

There has been no change in coffee since the recent issue of B. Hochkofler's circular, which reviews the market as follows: The market has ruled easier with dull business, owing principally to the steady decline of the article in New York. Local buyers follow closely the course of that market, not so much in anticipation of any immediate or direct influence it may exercise on our own, but in fear that each fluctuation, particularly on the down grade, may be the precursor of some radical and permanent change in values. It is difficult to assign any reason for this last movement beyond the manipulation of exchange operators, as there is no material change in the statistical position of actual coffee. It is true that conflicting reports of the growing Brazilian crops have lately been current, but those, after all, are mere surmises, it being too early in the season to form even an approximate estimate of the result. The sales for consumption during the fortnight were: 362 bags Costa Rica, 20 Nicaragua, 2218 Salvador and 1418 Guatemala, in all 4018 bags. Quotations are nominally unchanged, the majority of importers remaining firm in their views, but it would be difficult to effect sales on that basis and several small parcels of different descriptions were actually sold with some concessions in price. The low grades are without demand.

For St. Louis only 178 bags Guatemala were sold since last report, making the total shipments for that city during the month 1460 bags. On Wednesday the San Jose arrived with 799 bags from Central America.

Stocks of mixed rice are exhausted but small supplies are expected on the next steamer. Last sales were at $4 62½ per two mats. No. 1 rice is firm and slightly higher. Eastern mail advices regarding the rice crop are as follows: The promise of earlier periods is borne out in all of the states, except Louisiana. In August the latter promised to distance all previous records, but owing to untoward circumstances since and now prevailing it will not exceed that of last year and many predict a falling away of from 25 to 30 per cent. The largest crops made were those of 1885 and 1886, which stood respectively 485,000 and 410,000 bbls cleaned rice. Total crop is now placed at Atlantic Coast States 200,000 bbls, (325 lbs each); Louisiana 325,000 bbls (360 lbs each.)

There is a steady trade in canned fruits, without any changes of moment to report. Shipments are of good volume and packers now anticipate a better cleaning up of stocks than was expected early in the season. Salmon is moving off steadily, but there is not much life to the market. Estimates of the Alaska pack which were put very low early in the season, presumably by interested parties, are now being increased and the range of guesses is from 500,000 to 600,000 cases, the inside figure being considerably advanced. Quotations for Columbia river are $1 57½@1 60 and Alaska $1 27½@1 32½. Two cargoes have gone from British Columbia for London and several more will leave during the season.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The stock market was much stronger in tone to-day than for any day during the past two weeks, and material advances were scored in all of the active stocks. The sales of day were in the main favorable, and as the day wore on the upward move became more pronounced. The reports that rates would be advanced to and from Missouri river points helped the grangers. There were some profits acquired during the last hour, but the market recovered its tone toward the close, which was active and strong at the best prices of the day. The declines to-night are very few, and the loss of 1⅛ in San Francisco preferred was the only one of importance, while C., C., C. & St. Louis is up two, Louisville & Nashville and cotton seed oil 1⅝ each sugar 1⅜, Oregon Transcontinental 1¼, and Union Pacific 1 per cent.

Government bonds have been dull and steady.

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED

How "Wedding Day" Was Observed at the Exposition.

An Immense Crowd on Hand to See Two Knots Tied—The Contracting Parties—Presents, Rice, and Congratulations.

Hear the Bells! Wedding Bells! Soft and sweet their music swells as Edgar A. Poe observed, or words to that effect. Such might have been the adjuration addressed to the thousands upon thousands who gathered at the exhibition building last night to be witnesses to the double wedding which took place there according to previous announcement, if, only, there had been any "really truly" bells in the building. Their absence, however, did not seem to affect in the slightest degree either the impressiveness or the solemnity of the occasion or the event, or to detract from the evidently heartfelt sincerity with which not only the immediate relatives and friends of the high contracting parties, but all who were within sight and hearing of the young married people showered congratulations and good wishes upon them. Everybody who could get near enough to see or hear seemed to feel a deep personal interest in both brides and grooms.

Many of those present had been there themselves, and personally knew how serious a matter marriage is, a matter, as Shakespeare says, of more worth than to be dealt in by mere attorneyship; others hoped and desired to pass through the same pleasing ceremony and wanted to know by observation at least, how people looked and seemed to feel while passing through the ordeal. The arrangements for the ceremony themselves bespoke the general and widespread and sympathetic interest taken in the affair.

President of the N. P. I. A., Frank Dekum, took the affair practically into his own hand, as far as the ordering of the preliminaries went. A room—platform was erected during the day, which was covered with a handsome carpet. A handsome evergreen arch was sprung over the platform from the keystone of which depended a beautiful floral wedding bell from the floral gardens of I. G. Pfunder, covered with white roses and immortelles. Three white doves hovered without spread wings above the bell, symbolical, it is to be hoped, of peace and happiness for the young adventurers upon the sea of matrimony.

A space on the east side of floral hall had been set apart for the display of the wedding presents, and a brave display it was indeed. More than the thronging multitude arrayed in their best bibs and tuckers and smilingly impatient for the tap of the bell which announced the hour for the performance of the ceremony, these abundant gifts bespoke the liberal spirit of the metropolitan city of the Northwest. This is as good a place as any to make mention of these gifts. They were divided by the directors into two groups or parcels, by Secretary Kohler as follows:

No. 1, handsome bedroom suite from Oregon Manufacturing Co.; velvet embroidered plush cushion and two cut glass bottles with embroidered covers from Mrs. E. H. Lechler; rattan paper holder from Heywood Bros.; tub of apple butter from Pacific Cider and Vinegar Preserving Co.; base-burning parlor stove from Chown & Curtis; terrestrial globe from Weber & Co.; autoharp from Fisher's music store; black walnut dining table and half a dozen chairs from Ira F. Powers; sack of flour from Salem Flouring Mills; handsomely framed engraving, "The Wedding Dance," from S. & G. Gump; Brussels parlor carpet from Walter Bros.; two decorated vases from Mr. Parker, of the Art Pottery Works, in Exposition hall; engraved glassware from A. Kraiert Exposition Art Glass Works; solid gold wedding ring from John A. Beck; decorated hand-painted banner from Mrs. Bernard's art parlors; one package of Gold Dust washing powder and two of rolled oats from W. N. Dimmick & Co.; pastel painting from Sanborn, Vail & Co.; dressing case from Dr. William Pfunder.

No. 2—Handsome bedroom suite from N. P. I. Association; Bridge Beach cooking stove from Dekum Bros.; sack of flour from Portland Flouring Mills; walnut dining table with six chairs to match, from the N. P. I. A.; rattan plush covered table from Ayscough Bros.; parlor carpet by the N. P. I. A.; handsomely framed engraving, "Weighing the Baby," from S. & G. Gump; silk embroidered handkerchief holder from Mrs. E. H. Lechler; decorated smoking set from Mr. Parker, of the Art Pottery, Exposition building; beautiful plush-covered and satin-lined dressing case from Streibig & Lane; solid gold wedding ring, from A. Feldenheimer; corsets from Madame Griswold; one package of Gold Dust washing powder and two of rolled oats, from W. N. Dimmick & Co.; oil painting, from Mrs. J. B. Barchus.

Mr. R. E. Callahan, of the Exposition restaurant, furnished the complimentary wedding feast which was partaken of by the brides and grooms, Rev. Wm. Morrison, the officiating clergyman, and Superintendent Kohler, who acted as master of ceremonies. The "spread" was a delicate and at the same time a substantial and refreshing one and did credit to the occasion and to the caterer. This much for the preliminaries. It may be added, however, that long before 7 P. M. every seat in the spacious galleries was occupied and before the first notes of the band were heard every foot of standing room in the galleries was occupied by a good hundred closely packed and orderly mass of curious humanity. At 9 P. M. the wedding procession was formed and started from the ladies' parlor. Making their way with some difficulty through the thronging mass they passed down the east steps into floral hall and up the main aisle to their places under the wedding arch, where the Rev. William Morrison united James C. [illegible] and Rosetta Parker of Portland and John M. Fouding and Gertrude Engles of Cleone, Oregon, in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony being over the bridal party returned by way of the east aisle of floral hall to the ladies' parlor, where they received the congratulations of their friends. On the return march they were showered with rice, a liberal supply of which had been furnished by G. A. Snyder of the [illegible] grocery store, and almost smothered with roses from the gallery. After the reception they proceeded to the marriage feast, which passed off in the pleasantest manner imaginable.

NOTES AND INCIDENTS.

It is estimated that the attendance last night was fully as large, if not larger, than last Saturday night. To the reporter who occupied a seat on the rustic fence over the [illegible] stand, which reminded him of bunting blackbirds in golden cornfields, the scene presented to his vision was a confused bewildering one. Every inch of space as far as the eye could see was occupied by anxious spectators. The floral hall below looked like a sea of up-turned faces, so crowded was it that ever and anon some one would step on the flowerbeds. Once or twice some ladies were pushed in among the tall ferns.

The question arose, what were the people all there for? To see a wedding? Certainly the majority of those present had seen the ceremony performed before. But no one had ever seen a wedding in the Exposition building. Two couples were to be united in wedlock in the presence of the assembled multitude, and the curiosity to see them is what brought the crowd.

During the nuptial ceremonies the crowd to the right of the wedding arch began to surge back and forth like a field of waving grain. It was a mass of men, women and children and all move as one body.

Officer Thomas found it no easy task to keep the people from crowding onto the wedding platform and Officers Mott and Roberts worked like [illegible] clearing a passage for the bridal party.

Very few could hear the wedding ceremony, still their imagination went a great ways. The reporter on his lofty perch could see the contracting parties join hands and go through other maneuvers necessary to make them one, and in his imagination he thought he could hear the groom say "I will," and the bride "I will." The entire ceremony lasted but a few minutes.

It was amusing to watch the crowd when some of the rice was first thrown after the bridal couples in response to the selection played by the band, "What Shall the Harvest Be." First there were but a few handfuls thrown, but soon it came down like a summer thunder shower—it actually poured, and people standing down below began to use their umbrellas as a shield. The music was particularly appropriate. To the selection "What Shall the Harvest Be," the exposition of 1890 may furnish a refrain. The "Baby's Lullaby" and other nursery ditties were peculiarly suggestive and appropriate.

"Didn't I tell you we would have a crowd?" triumphantly queried Superintendent Kohler. He was pleased with the attendance, as was also President Dekum. Both had worked hard to make wedding day a success, and to their efforts in a large measure may be attributed the good attendance last night.

THE MUSIC.

For the first time since the opening of the exposition Liberati's music was last night to a certain degree subordinated to other matters, at least through one part of the evening programme. The wedding festivities attracted for a while the undivided attention of the immense throng. And yet the great virtuoso lost none of his laurels. His afternoon selections were of a high order and received with unbounded pleasure. The "Fliegende Hollander" was new to the audience, and served in a marked degree to demonstrate the excellence of Liberati's method. His cornet solo as usual was rapturously encored. The closing number in the afternoon, a march from Wagner's "Tannhauser," was a wonderful and soul-stirring work of instrumentation, and "whetted the appetite" for the great Wagner recital next Friday night, the 11th inst.

In the evening a quartette from Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," by Mmes. Liberati and Sig. Pesci and Boll, called out storms of applause and won a deserved encore. The "Heart's First Love Throbs," and selections from Eilenberg's "Robert Bruce," were [illegible] pieces of instrumentation. The "Wedding March" preceded the marriage ceremony and was followed by "What Shall the Harvest Be?" Then came the "Baby Lullaby" (suggestive, very, under the circumstances), the "Wild West," and to conclude, the "Pleasures of Matrimony," the title of which, it is to be hoped, is prophetic of what alone will befall the young folks who last night entered into the state.

THE EXHIBITS.

SIGNS OF THE PROSPERITY OF THE NORTHWEST AS NOTED AT THE INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION.

All visitors to Portland cannot but notice the general air of prosperity that prevails throughout the city and it is probable that at no time in the history of Portland has there been such prosperity. The cause of this is easily understood by those who have watched carefully the progress of the country the past year. Many sections of Oregon and Washington have had a splendid harvest while the thousands of newcomers have brought into circulation a great deal of money. Perhaps the best evidence of the great resources of the Northwest is to be found in Machinery hall of the the Industrial exposition as here is displayed a wonderful assortment of machinery of every kind the use of which has so materially helped in the development of Oregon and Washington. The most noticeable feature of this part of the Exposition is the great display of Staver & Walker which occupies the entire northeast quarter of Machinery hall. Here will be noticed some of the many machines that have made the name of Staver & Walker a household word throughout the entire Northwest. The machinery sold by this firm has perhaps done as much or more in the development of our country than any other one cause, it being the best and latest improved machinery for the cultivation of the soil, the harvesting of the crops and the converting of our forests into lumber. In their display is noticed all the leading lines of machinery and implements in use to-day throughout the Northwest, among others a magnificently finished J. I. Case center draft plow, nickel plated with gold trimmings, also a beautifully finished Hoosier free feed seeder and drill, these being the recognized standards of excellence in plowing and seeding implements. Also a fine line of nickel plated garden tools and one of the world renowned Studebaker steel skein farm wagons, acknowledged the world over as being the strongest and lightest draft wagon made.

MOXEE CO.'S EXHIBITS.

This company, located at North Yakima, Eastern Washington, has placed a neat show case in the west gallery in which is shown a wide range of products. The company may be considered as the pioneer development company of Eastern Washington, and any person viewing their exhibit can not fail to see at a glance what push, energy and capital must have been expended before the apparently sterile soil of the Yakima region could be made to yield to the tiller such abundant results. In less than five years this company has demonstrated to the world that with proper irrigation these lands will not only raise all the varieties of grain suitable to this clime but it will also raise a finer crop than can be found elsewhere on the Pacific slope. A tobacco that requires such skillful manipulation and treatment becomes at once the peer of its fellow weed from St. Domingo or Porto Rico. The barley, a sample of which is shown, is strictly choice brewing article. Their hops have already become a standard in this market. The fine leaf tobacco of which the land will produce half a ton to the acre is beyond question a wonder for these latitudes, and proof of this may be seen in the excellent cigars manufactured at the home farm of the company, also on exhibition in this case. Altogether this is certainly one of the finest showings that the new state of Washington has sent to its neighbor and reflects great credit alike on the state and on the president, Mr. William Keer of the Moxee Company.

OREGON WOOL EXHIBITS.

Since the opening of the exposition Messrs. Pope & Co. have added several important features to their exhibit, notably among which are some fine samples of scoured combings raised by Messrs. Ladd & Reid, two enormous fleeces from Leicester and Cotswold thoroughbreds also raised by Ladd & Reid showing a length and fineness of staple that cannot be surpassed in any part of the Union. Willamette Valley wool growers are more alert nowadays than formerly and the flocks throughout the valley have of late years been greatly benefited by interbreeding with the strong and robust progeny of the Ladd herd of Leicester and Cotswolds. The wools from these crops are admirably suited for the manufacture of braids, an industry that has had to draw large quantities of its supplies from abroad. Messrs. Geo. Pope & Co. also have an elaborate showing of McDougall's sheep dip at their stand with all the literature belonging to this great scab specific. It may be mentioned in this connection that they do not claim their dip to be the only non-poisonous dip, but they do assert that it is the oldest and most reliable of all the carbolic dips known in the world, being now manufactured solely by the sons as successors to the inventor, the late Dr. McDougall of Edinburgh, Scotland, the discoverer of carbolic acid.

EXHIBIT OF [illegible]

The Columbia River Paper Company was incorporated in March, 1884, with the following officers: J. K. Gill, president; D. B. Full[illegible], secretary; Charles A. Malarkey, treasurer; and J. J. Aiken, assistant secretary. This company is engaged in the manufacture of news, manilla and straw paper, the mills being located at La Camas, Wn. The business of the company is increasing very rapidly, which is due to the steady [illegible] to the great and constant improvement in the quality of the paper manufactured. This company is now manufacturing all the newspaper that is used on the Northwestern coast, The Oregonian and [illegible] of this city, the Spokane Falls Review and the Post-Intelligencer of Seattle, being among the numerous patrons. A handsome exhibit of the various kinds of paper manufactured by this company is made at the fair this year.

FURNITURE.

Those visitors who are desirous of seeing one of the most complete lines of furniture, mirrors, carpets, stoves, etc. to be found in Portland should call at 46 First street. Mr. C. [illegible] Forbes, the proprietor of this famous store, offers special inducements to people of limited means, thus enabling them to provide themselves with all the necessary comforts attending the furnishing of a house. This he does by taking a small cash payment and allowing the purchasers to pay small sums from time to time, charging a moderate interest on deferred payments. The installment plan is an easy method of purchasing goods and by taking advantage of the opportunity this offers the poor man is helped to enjoy many of the conveniences.

ATTENTION, FARMER AND SHEEP OWNERS.

James Laidlaw & Co. make an exhibit of Morris Little & Sons' sheep dip and cattle wash, an [illegible] [illegible] in cold water producing a milk mush which [illegible] certain death to all pests [illegible] sheep, cattle or domestic animals. [illegible] the quality and [illegible] wool [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] inclement weather being thus valuable as a winter dip. The showing of wire here manufactured by the Baker Wire Company is a notable feature of the display. The practical interest attached to this wire lies in the fact that it extends a greater number of rods to the same weight than any other wire manufactured. The particular merit of the Norwegian plow handle by the Northwestern [illegible] [illegible] that these plows scour in all climates and under all conditions of weather and soil.

WHITE SEWING MACHINE.

It is conceded by a large number of people that the famous White Sewing Machine has no superior in the market as a thoroughly reliable family machine. Mr. F. H. [illegible], the Western manager of the White, has a most elaborate and artistic exhibit of etchings, arrasene and tinsel work, all executed on the White. The display of etchings on satin and lace curtains may certainly be considered one of the gems of the exposition.

ARCHITECTURAL DRAWINGS.

Otto Kleemann has on exhibition at the fair several drawings which are perspectives of residences erected in Portland during the year, which are most creditable manifestations of the skill of the draughtsman. Mr. Kleemann has a beautiful perspective of St. Mary's academy, situated on the corner of Fifth and Market, at [illegible] this city, which he is unable to exhibit at the fair on account of his limited space.

Those who have seen and admired the art silver portraits of Colonel [illegible] and Mrs. Wetzel [illegible] on exhibition [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] will be pleased to learn that this lady will receive orders for [illegible] [illegible] all those interested [illegible] [illegible] can have Christmas orders and [illegible] guaranteed.

Regular Monthly Meeting—Interesting and Important Business Transacted.

There was a full attendance of the board at the monthly meeting Tuesday evening, Mr. H. W. Corbett in the chair. The routine business was of great interest, although [illegible] were reported by Mr. [illegible], who were chairman of the executive committee, and Officer Wood of the police force. They were of the usual kind; homes found for helpless and dependent children, young delinquents received from the jail or courts, runaways returned to parents, warnings or advice given to [illegible].
